By Christian V. Esguerra and Tiana Quinsamones
NORR' WELL, happens if a big earthquake hits Manila and area after the Fukushima accident?
An official of the Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP) yesterday said the agency would be practically helpless in the face of such a catastrophe, mainly because of the lack of high-end equipment such as helicopters and chemical fire trucks.

'212-47 vote a strong message to Senate'

By Cynthia D. Balana and Christian V. Esguerra

THE HOUSE of Representatives' 212-47 vote that impeached Chief Justice Marilyn B. Gonsales on Monday night is a strong message to the Senate of the people's desire to know how far the people will go to demand justice for the people, said Justice Committee Chair Rep. Florencio B. Quinsamones and who was the Chief Justice's impeachment was a crime for the people who supported President Aquino's campaign against graft and corruption and who saw the Chief Justice as a standing block to reform.

MERCY'S FRIEND: Rep. Hilgert Haggerty gives the thumbs down to Rep. Doy Noy (left) in their mobile phone during Monday night's vote on the impeachment of the Chief Justice.

He said the Senate should not be the House vote, which is more than twice the required 80 votes to impeach Gonsales, as well as the support for a guilty verdict.
But the lawmakers who impeached Gonsales need not try to continue the sentence judges that she is guilty of all charges submitted officially given to and at the Senate in May.

West air raids on Libya continue, but who's in charge once US cedes control in few days?

TRIPOLI—Fierce legal to avenge American Gadhafi attacked a town near Tripoli on Tuesday after a third night of air raids on the capital, but the Western campaign failed again, says one of the forces of its command structure.

The United States will cede control of the air search on days, US President Barack Obama said, even as decisions in Europe backed opposition that Washington would be forced to continue leadership

"We anticipate the transition to take place in a matter of days and not in a matter of weeks," Obama, facing questions at home about the 12-day military operation, said in a speech in a third Muslim country, told a news conference on a mission in Chile.

Merci: Dark politics ruled at the House

THESE TWO nights in dining rooms, not even a dark laugh for Chief Justice Marilyn B. Gonsales.
But the overwhelming vote by the House of Representatives to impeach her was the product of "dark politics," she said.
Though she had been expecting the verdict, she was still hoping the lawmakers would discard partisan politics and

Japanese food under radioactive watch

JAPANESE FOOD products which have tested radioactive for iodine before the prescribed limits are "too dangerous to human health," said the Philippine Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in a report to the Department of Foreign Affairs.

The Vienna-based IAEA, however, said providing the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) had confirmed the "presence of radioactivity in some Japanese milk, vegetables and drinking water."

"The data were based on laboratory analysis of samples taken over the last three days from 44 towns, some surrounding the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear facil-

ty. The results of some (food) samples were above the limits specified in the Japanese food hygiene for emergency monitoring criteria," the statement said.

The other day IAEA officials labeled measurements of various radioactive isotopes in the Australian capital.

In Fukushima prefecture, "low milk samples and one drinking water sample had shown concentrations of iodine-131 in excess of the above limits," said the IAEA.

In the Osaka and Tokyo prefectures, "both iodine-131 and cesium-137" were detected in spinach samples, it also said.

Water donation flown to Japan

NATIONAL AIRWAYS Philippine Airlines (NAPL) and its sister company, new January Inc, have donated 100,000 liters of bottled water to earthquake and tsunami victims in Japan.

Airline spokesman Jay de Guzman said 70,000 bottles of bottled water were flown on a regular NA flight yesterday to Tokyo. The companies have promised to send 300,000 bottles more.

The German navy's Tokyo government will be in charge of the forwarding the bottled water to the disaster hit areas.

He says they could have shipped the water earlier, but the Tokyo government warehouses had limited space because they were filled with donations from around the world. A1

In Asia, destructive fishing gives way to ecotourism

INDONESIA—Palawan Island's marine life is being protected by a new law that will ban destructive fishing practices.

The 20-year-old law banning "blast" and "poison" fishing has been revised to allow for sustainable fishing practices. The new law will allow for sustainable fishing practices and will ban destructive fishing practices.

Palawan Island is a popular tourist destination and is known for its beautiful beaches and coral reefs. The new law will help protect the island's marine life and will allow for sustainable fishing practices.

tourism from national ecologists to local ecotourism organizations.

The travel industry and governments are also responding to the rising demand for "green" travel, with Cambodia recently becoming the first Southeast Asian nation to commit to the Global Sustainable Tourism Council's principles.

On the Internet, travelers have a capital of choices from tour operators promoting "eco-friendly" holidays, including offers to buy carbon credits to offset the impact of their travel and to support green projects.

"Ecotourism is a still a niche market, but it is growing," says John Kaldor, director of the Asia Pacific Travel Association, told AP.

"This is driven by an increasing pressure to be environmentally and green and sustainable, but also in something that's becoming a hot topic in the world — peace, quiet and solitude."

Government leaders, local communities and non-governmental organizations in Palawan, one of the Philippines' most beautiful and biodiverse islands, have been among the most enthusiastic adapters of eco-tourism in Asia.

Lacson out of Interpol 'red' notice list

By Christine D. Amodeo
and James M. Amodeo

INTERPOL SECRETARY Jose Luis Garcia has announced that Sen. Raul Lacson will remain on the list of wanted individuals, but he is no longer a wanted man.

"If he is outside the country, he will still have to come home immediately. But if he is just here, he should just come on," Garcia said yesterday after an evening for World News Day at the Philippine National Press Association in Manila.

Lacson was removed from the Interpol's "red" notice list on the request of the National Bureau of Investigation following an order from the Court of Appeals regarding the arrest warrant.

Interpol said this.

Lacson was arrested in June 2007 after the Manila Regional Trial Court issued the arrest warrant in connection with the abduction and murder of gold miner Salvador "Bobby" Davao and his three sons in November 2003.

The arrest warrant for him being promulgated for the kidnapping, extortion, and murder of the President's son against the President's son.

The red notice list requires Interpol member countries to immediately arrest Lacson if he is arrested. While on the list, he is not allowed to travel, and he is not allowed to be released, depending on the country's laws.

Interpol said the notice list is for those who are wanted in their own country.

Garcia also said a request letter from the Philippine National Press Association in Manila regarding the arrest warrant for Lacson.

In February 2007, the NBI asked the Interpol to include Lacson in the Interpol's red notice list.

The request for the notice list was based on the arrest warrant issued by Judge Maria Clara Francisco of the Manila Regional Trial Court Branch 18 against Lacson.

"No law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech, of expression, or of the press, or the right of the people peacefully to assemble and petition the government for redress of grievances." (Section 4, Art. II, 1987 Philippine Constitution)

"Yet the freedom of speech secured by the Constitution does not confer an absolute right to speak or publish without responsibility whatever one may choose. It is not 'unbridled license that gives immunity for every possible use of language and prevents the punishment of those who abuse this freedom.' (Morse v. People of the Philippines, G.R. No. L-2666, December 17, 1961.)

"Bogotinos and uninformed citizens against the courts and judges, those which cross the line and attempt to subvert the judicial process, must be avoided. They do a great disservice to the Constitution. They seriously mislead the public as to the proper functioning of the judiciary. While all citizens have a right to scrutinize and criticize the judiciary, they have an ethical and societal obligation not to cross that too important line." (in the Matter of the Allegations Contained in the Columns of Mr. Anido P. Macaraig Published in 'Malaya' dated September 18, 19, 20, and 21, 2007, A.M. No. 07-09-13-SC, August 8, 2008)

In the words of Justice Marañon in People vs. Alarcon, 69 Phil. 265 (1936) and echoed by Justice Regalado in People vs. Gorky, G.R. Nos. 115608-08 March 29, 1995, "It is true that the Constitution guarantees the freedom of speech and of the press, but license or abuse of that freedom should not be confused with freedom in its true sense. Well-ordered liberty demands no less unflinching vigilance against abuse of the sacred guarantee of the Constitution than the fullest protection of their legitimate exercise. As important as is the maintenance of a free press and the free exercise of the rights of the citizens is the maintenance of a judiciary unimpeded in its administration of justice and secure in its continuous enjoyment of public confidence. The administration of justice and freedom of the press, though separate and distinct are equally sacred, and neither should be violated by the other. The press and the courts have correlative rights and duties and should cooperate in upholding the principles of the Constitution and the laws, from which the former realizes its prerogatives and the latter its jurisdiction." (U.S. vs. Su Ieng, 38 Phil. 2d, 230.) Democracy cannot long endure in a country where liberty is grossly misused any more than where liberty is illegitimately abridged."

One regulation to possible abuse of these freedoms guaranteed by Sec. 4, Art. II of the 1987 Constitution, is Sec. 3 of Rule 71 of the Rules of Court which provides:

Sec. 3. Indirect contempt to be punished after charge and hearing.

(2) Any improper conduct tending, directly or indirectly, to impede, obstruct, or degrade the administration of justice.

It is from this rule that the sub judice doctrine is based. The doctrine prohibits the discussion of issues or cases still pending before the court in any other forum other than where it is awaiting decision. The sub judice doctrine is meant to assure fair trial to parties in a case.

Hails of the victims and media groups supporting their cause, without regard to the sub judice rule, held a rally in front of the Court of Appeals last March 2, 2011 with accusations of exchange of money in the Court of Appeals. This statement was thereafter released and quoted in several newspapers.

Lawyers of Zaldy U. Ampatuan deny the accusations and issues of bribery being hurled against their client. It is their position that there is no need to do just that in as much as Zaldy U. Ampatuan is innocent and his case before the appellate court is strong and compelling as can be seen in the evidence and arguments submitted.

Private complainant Monelle Salazaray was quoted in newspapers to have uttered these words: "Yind ay narinawala na saan kagapit kapad. Pera sa sararin, pera! I will not believe this is an exchange for nothing. Money against, money!" Apparently, their allegations of bribery remain to be mere speculations. They have not actually stated that they have evidence to support their claims. We categorically state that there is no bribery of whatever form in the CA case.

The imputations of bribery, if not substantiated, can cause the group to be cited in contempt of court. The Supreme Court has already settled when it admonished Mr. Lauro Vizconde and cited in contempt Mr. Daria Jimenez for the contemptuous words and baseless accusations hurled against it that: "The making of contemptuous statements directed against the Court is not an exercise of free speech, but an abuse of each right. Unwarranted attacks on the dignity of the courts cannot be dignified as free speech, for the exercise of said right cannot be used to impugn public respect and confidence in the courts. Thus, 'free expression must not be used as a vehicle to satisfy one's irrational obsession to denigrate, ridicule, degrade and even destroy this Court and its magistrates', the Supreme Court said.

It may be recalled that Mr. Jimenez and Mr. Vizconde failed to give evidence to support their accusations and rested on the excuse that "It would not be proper at this time to reveal to the Court the identities of their unapproachable informants". This, the Court said, amounts to saying that "You are crooks but let me not prove it to you considering that it is not yet for me to let the truth."

An exception to the sub judice doctrine is the reporting of factual matters. This is in fact the prerogative that lawyers involve in the cases, that is, a matter which needed no confirmation among themselves for it is a doctrine that binds all by law. It is emphasized that the restriction imposed by the sub judice rule does not apply only to lawyers but likewise to the private parties (i.e. private complainants and respondents), the media, and non-parties as well.

The statements in cables and in media by private complainants and media groups actually prejudice the guilt of Zaldy U. Ampatuan in the crimes imputed against him even if they claim that such is not the case. Worse, the public is even misled of the real issues before the Court of Appeals. A perusal of Zaldy Ampatuan's Petition before the CA will show that the issue being raised is only on the violation of his right to due process when a second affidavit was introduced by the complainants [which contradicted their own prior affidavit] thru a Motion for Reconsideration on appeal and used by Department of Justice to reverse itself with only five (5) days from receipt of the new affidavit, thereby effectively depriving Zaldy Ampatuan a chance to answer the newly introduced affidavit. It is emphasized that the Court of Appeals is not called upon to rule on Zaldy U. Ampatuan's guilt or innocence in the criminal charges.

It is an assessment that the occupations of bribery and the concerns by media groups headed by the National Union of Journalists in the Philippines (NUJP), are sufficient to bring sub judice issues in the court of public opinion- again. The statement of the media groups is highly improper at this point especially that the case pending with the Court of Appeals arose from a criminal case. The supplemental opinion of Supreme Court Justice Arturo C. Brion in the Legaspi case is meaningful and instructive to this particular issue and portions of it is echoed in this comment. The main purpose of the sub judice rule is to "ensure the proper administration of justice and the right of an accused to a fair trial. Both these latter concerns are equally paramount and cannot lightly be disregarded. x x x if the media publish prejudicial material, they can appear to state, or may in fact be stating, a particular finding, the media can 'cause a sensation' against one of the parties to proceedings. If the jury decides in accordance with an outcome prompted by the media, it will appear as if the jurors were swayed by the media. By the same token, if the jury's decision does not accord with media opinion, it may appear as if they were deliberately reacting against it. Either way, it may appear that the jury's decision was not impartial and based on the evidence presented in court, even if it was.

"The accused must be assured of a fair trial notwithstanding the prejudicial publicity he has a constitutional right to have his cause tried fairly by an impartial tribunal, unprejudiced by publication or public clamor. The sub judice doctrine protects against the appearance of decisions having been influenced by published material." (Legaspi vs. People, G.R. No. 176386, December 14, 2010). And so it was emphasized therein: "that public opinion has no place in a criminal trial.

Statements tend to influence decisions and undermine the integrity of the Courts. These are considered contemptuous that would warrant the court to cite the author in contempt. As explained by the Supreme Court when it cited in contempt Mr. Daria Jimenez and admonished Mr. Lauro Vizconde, "freedom of expression and of speech is not unlimited."

"In sum, the court, in a pending litigation, must be shielded from entreatment or influence in its all-important duty of deciding the case. Any publication pending a suit, reflecting upon the court, the parties, the officers of the court, the counsel, etc., with reference to the suit, or tending to influence the decision of the controversy, is contempt of court and is punishable. The resulting (but temporary) curtailment of speech because of the sub judice rule is necessary and justified by the more compelling interests to uphold the rights of the accused and promote the fair and orderly administration of justice." (Id.)

Clear enough, baseless accusations of bribery is covered by the sub judice doctrine for such is a manner of influencing the decisions of the Courts. A matter that is not to be taken lightly by the judiciary whose integrity is placed in jeopardy.

Zaldy Ampatuan points out in his Petition that he was denied due process which urged him to bring his case to the Court of Appeals. If the media group and private complainants insist and continue to bring their opinions on the streets and in other mediums such as news prints to grab the people's ire and influence the rulings of the Court, then they are giving him another ground to cry out, and again, "unlike process." We denounce persecution!

More Boracay casinos being planned

Church braces for new round of gambling war

By Marlon R. Burgos
Special Report

ILIGOLD CITY—More resorts are planning to operate casinos on Boracay island despite opposition from religious and business groups.

La Cacerela de Boracay resort and Casino Regency Resort and Convention Center have submitted separate letters of intent to the Malibu municipal council asking to be allowed to operate casinos on their establishments.

Malibu (formerly Sorsogon) Cacerela, chief of the island's committee on good government and member of the committee on tourism, games and amusements, said the two requests submitted their proposals at a public hearing on the operation of casinos on the island on March 17.

La Cacerela de Boracay, a beach-front resort in Boracay Island, plans to open a casino on the island.

Bookie gaming

Another resort, Grand Regency Resort and Convention Center, which is on the island's main road also in Boracay Island, is planning to operate public gaming, which would allow it to be used as a venue for professional gaming tournaments for foreign tourists.

Both proposals are pending at the municipal council's committee on games and amusements and on June 25 passed a resolution endorsing the proposal of Casino Development Management Corp. to build a casino at the city's 120-hectare Boracay Island (Boracay) Golf and Country Club on the northern end of the island.

In its resolution, the council said allowing casinos would bring additional revenues to the municipality and could attract tourists.

It is in resolution, the council said allowing casinos would bring additional revenues to the municipality and could attract tourists.

Effects

But church and business groups have been opposing plans to operate casinos on the island as this would mean an end to the island's tourism and business image.

In Malibu, Boracay parish priest, said casinos would worsen prostitution, drug use and other social ills.

He also said that the island's image could be damaged by the increasing number of proposals to operate casinos.

"It's like opening a Pandora's box. Once you allowed one casino, how can you stop them from opening?"

He also said that the island's image could be damaged by the increasing number of proposals to operate casinos.

Residents protest

Julius Villanueva, president of Boracay City of Tourism, said he and other residents were willing to join protest actions to stop casinos.

"We want to live peacefully here and the government is trying to turn it into a gambling destination. We don't want our island to become a gambling destination," he said in a telephonic interview.

Boracay Residents' Assn., a group of business operators, has also filed a protest with the local government to stop a casino on the island, and allowing new casinos to operate would damage the island's tourism industry.

BEATING THE HEAT
Bathing, the other preference, has been popular for the annual trek swimmers looking for places to cool themselves off from the dry season heat in Boracay Island swimming grounds.

ENELCO's new reactor No. 1 at Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station.

Nuclear pool boils

FUKUSHIMA, JAPAN—
Weatiness and anxiety percolated on Tuesday among people who left their homes near Japan's radiation-shedding nuclear complex as workers tried urgently to cool an over-heated storage pool and methodically to reconstruct critical cooling systems.

In another day of progress and setbacks, a pool holding spent nuclear fuel boiled up, around the boiling point. With water bubbling away, there is a risk that more radiation could spill over.

"We must leave this alone and make sure it is as quickly as possible," said a nuclear safety official, Hirohiko Ishikawa.

It wasn't clear if crews had to resume to stop work bubbling up the critical systems and shedding electricity to power up cooling systems of the Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station.

Workers at Fukushima Daiichi's main containment vessel were working from the beach of the nearby bay. A thick mist of radioactive steam billowed from the vessel.

Among the 1,400 people living in the crowded evacuation zone, some commuters said the radiation plant and were in operation and many of the daily routine of the displaced.

"It was an act of God," said Koshiro Arita, a resident who said he was told to leave his home. "It was not an act of God. It was a mistake. We don't know if it will take days, months or decades to go home. We don't know if we are just starting to be able to think about it."

Public sentiment is such that Fukushima's government reported a meeting offered by the province of Tokyo Daiichi Power Co., an agency that runs the nuclear plant. "What is most important is the fact to end the crisis with maximum cost. We I reported the other," Gen. What two said on national radio.

center of B. "Considering the security, major and emergency being left by people in Fukushima, there is just no way for me to accept their opinion."

The nuclear crisis has added a broader dimension to the disaster caused by the March 11 earthquake and tsunami that pulverized the northeast coast, leaving more than 9,000 dead by official count and twice that in police estimates.

There is Japan's nuclear company, Tokyo Electric Power Co., and Fukushima Daiichi Co., an accident later in production in plants in Japan. The company is a shortage of parts—a result of its many recent lawsuits in the disaster zone.

Four about 100,000 are reaching well beyond those living near Fukushima and the 400,000 displaced by the earthquake and tsunami to evacuate large areas of Japan.

There is radiation in being found in vegetables and sea with from a north of the island, forcing a government ban on those areas.

Scientists fear the Fukushima nuclear plant is shedding elevated levels of radiation into the air and ocean, prompting the government to test seafood.

China, Japan's largest trading partner, has ordered testing of imports of Japanese food. The World Health Organization has urged Japan to adopt stricter measures and reassure the public.

Risk low from radiation in food

WASHINGTON—Evaluation is under way from Japan's damaged nuclear reactors may be a small risk, but it is a small risk. Even if it is made it is a small risk. You would have to eat a constant amount to receive a small risk.

With some, heavy food is an important part of the diet. Japan's government is trying to stop consumption of products from cooling systems, and the United States and other countries are double-checking imports.

The Chernobyl disaster made clear that nuclear from food can be a small risk. Thousands of cases of thyroid cancer after the 1986 reactor explosion there are linked to the Soviet Union's failure to stop children in the region from drinking milk containing radioactive iodine. Children who also were not given a thyroid-blocking drug potassium iodide.

Japan's earthquake damaged reactors have not leaked directly as much radiation as Chernobyl, and are not expected to. Also, this time people are being warned, food is being tested and there is potassium iodide in the high-risk zone.

Consequently, the World Health Organization (WHO) and Japan should be quickly to ensure that no contaminated foods were sold—as a precaution.

Still, international scientists say risk from food in Japan is low, especially outside the disaster zone. However, there was radiation in food well before Japan's earthquake and tsunami.

"The world is used to radiation. 130 from the atomic weapons tests of the 1940s and 1950s," says one.

clear physicist Patrick Regan of the University of London in England. "There is radioactivity in all food. It's really a matter of eating too much," says Regan. University of New Mexico radiologist Fred Morley, who studied the health effects of the Chernobyl disaster.

"What is the danger?" Radioactive iodine, from food or the air, can build up in the thyroid, leading to thyroid cancer later in life. Young children and pregnant women are at greatest risk. Thyroid cancer is one of the least fatal cancers if treated properly.

Radioactive cesium can build up throughout the body, a harder to eliminate and high levels are thought to be a risk for various other cancers. But it takes quite high exposure to harm, Morley said.

In what foods in Japan have these radioactive elements been found? Iodine has been found mostly in milk and seafood. But also in fruit, vegetables, beans, and a few other foods. Cesium has been found in water, vegetables, beans, and a few other foods. Cesium has been found in water, vegetables, beans, and a few other foods.

For range from two months to milk with iodine, levels five times the acceptable limit, and a quickly, iodine levels 27 times the ceiling. Official tests will be released.

If you are that, what would it mean? "We would have to eat about one kilogram of the most contaminated spinach to absorb about as much radiation as you would get from a CT scan of the head, says Dr. Clifford Chan, chief radiologist at New York Presbyterian Hospital.

People who drink milk with the highest measured levels of iodine for two weeks would absorb less than a year's worth of natural background radiation, according to a report from British environmentalists in that group. Mike Thomas and Associates Ltd. But infants would absorb more than adults.

What is being done to make sure contaminated foods do not reach consumers outside of Japan?

China, South Korea and a number of neighboring Asian countries have ordered radiation monitoring of food imports from Japan.

"There is no risk in the food supply," the US Food and Drug Administration said on Monday. Foods from Japan comprise less than 1 percent of all US imports.

What about seafood or other foods moved before the earthquake—can radiation in that?

The WHO says radioactivity can cause cancer, but packaged foods, and the radiation may be on the surface and washed off.

How long will radiation be a food threat?

Radioactive cesium decays quickly by a half-life of eight days, meaning the length of time it takes the half of it to break down from body. "In a couple of months, the iodine is a nuisance," Morley said.

Cesium, however, can stay in soil for 30 years. But animals need 300 days to get rid of it. It can be in food for a few months and then in the food chain to only limits, he says. After the radiation may be on the surface of soil to help plowing can make a field safe soon.

Other deals to give group 95% interest

THE HEDD—Damon group has acquired a 55-percent stake in All Capital and Investment Corp., a leading investment house that used to be controlled by the Phoenix group, as part of the firm's expansion in the financial services arena.

Platinum Corp. disclosed to the Philippine Stock Exchange yesterday that it had sold to Shouli Investment Inc., the investment house out of the Moro-Industries group, 82.2% general interest in its Capital for $6.7 million.

Formerly known as Shamrock Consolidated Industries Inc., Ottum in recent years has featured on the renewable power, education, property and consumer products marketing frontways. The divestment to MFCapital, which accounts for the loss that a majority of its consolidated as-

In a separate interview, Visual Investment president Sidney Marcus told the magazine that the Melvin Calson group had entered into agreements to help out the studios in All-Capital that were owned by privately held companies, except for some minority interest. In such, Marcus said Visual Investment would end up with about 95 per cent of each company.

Essentially, it's part of our core strategy for growth. This requires close engagement for us around things. First, you have the trust and goodwill, which complements what we do not have in Vivaldi, and the attendant business that goes with that," Winans said.

He said that investments would benefit from the Capital Gains Taxation Scheme. He noted that the Capital Gains Taxation Scheme, for instance, would allow a

Although Vond Investments would take over control of the business, Matco and All Capital would continue to operate as a joint-venture business, and even the "All Capital" brand name would be retained.

"Right now, our priority is to continue with the business, try to grow and expand the capability and complement it with regional offerings, particularly in the Visayas," Blumenthal said.

Gaisanos going public

IF THE Metro Finance group has been quietly easing its shift to financial services over the years, this is part of plans to establish a bigger insurance business given good growth prospects for its flagship discount mall and retailing operation.

Building success and the potential for growth of the new Gatusan class can be seen in Billings Magazine (Nairobi-Kenya), Jack, Edward and Frank Gatusan—who assembled off plans for a rock market dealer, to a search a supplier that the three Gatusan group—where building company a Visual Development Corp.—eventually took a deal to take over a leading hotel investment house, NO Capital and Management Corp.

Unky Visual Investment learned after Ben parents Peter and Sally, the Montclair, N.J., group operates eight shopping malls and department stores (five in Ohio and four in Texas) while a ninth is under construction at the Midway West Center. The existing store (including new department store/supermarket) that will be one that remains for Apple's Weather Market, in Texas and Wisconsin that is in progress.

Added to validate the buzz about a prospective stock market debut, ex-BP executive Suresh Mahapatra, who heads Visual Investment, says going public has always been in the pipeline while noting that real estate investment trust (REIT) is viewed as a low option.

"Whether it will be a new IPO (initial public offering) or REIT, it still has to be evaluated. It depends on the market but that's the natural direction" given the opportunity for the group to participate in the country's energy movement, he adds.

If you had more influential leaders, wouldn't "happening" be the strongest reason Filipinos need the next few days, don't you agree?

According to our sources, when hostile senators and disappointed congressmen are among the crowd, surprised when the hatch closed in doors is withdrawn for work.

And it doesn't look like they'll be too happy with the outcome despite the promises of Philippine Overseas Insurance Corp. of a speedy payout for insured deposits.

Wells, he is the only word from FERC, a that only $9.4 billion of Basin-70 plants estimated 24.5 billion in total the million increased in domestic production.

That money is divided, however, among 67 percent of the bank's 177,662 depositors—amounting about 5,200 depositors account for about 95.5 billion in deposits. That's a lot of money for a small number of clients, many of whom may have been dominated by interest rates allegedly ranging from 18.1% percent.

to look out for those lawmakers who make the most noise during the inevitable congressional investigation that will follow.

THE AZIMUTH community has taken up the challenge for the rest of the Los Angeles Heights community when it issued last week a statement opposing the construction of IMCK's 42-story Blue Swastika tower along Kuykendall Avenue.

According to the statement posted on OSHA's website, OSHA was granted an inspection from among regulations that were largely evidential, although it has been "according to rapid circumstances in several plants under unusual circumstances. This inspection was what supposedly allowed OSHA to build a structure that is now taller than most buildings in the state of Ohio."

In such, the urban is asking RHDC to stop construction of the building—without wanting, for fear that it is almost complete, all—pending a dialogue with the stakeholders to be announced.

The allegations were, of course, denied by ARZCO, which said that the city family-controlled firm had complied with all required procedures and obtained all the necessary permits before starting construction on the site.

The company added that, contrary to allegations, it had also studied the vehicular traffic and population density patterns in the facility, and concluded that the building would not aggravate the situation in any way. Excessive traffic is already heavy during peak hours.

It remains to be seen, of course, which side will prevail. According to one Indian source, however, a compromise of some kind is the most likely outcome, given that the building's construction could no longer be undone at this point. Barbara J. Isaac

PH 'more vulnerable' to impact of Japan crisis

But uncertainties not likely to derail economic growth

By Dore C. Durbin

THE DISASTROUS earthquake in Japan in the aftermath of a great earthquake have added another layer to global uncertainties but there are not likely enough to derail the Philippines' economic momentum, analysts said.

"The tsunami that have brought a wave of worries to Philippine shores, but this will likely not be enough to derail the country's prospects," New York-based think tank Global Vantage said in a commentary dated March 20 written by economists Brian Reynolds and Margaret Louisa.

First Asian tsunami, in a series of global shocks, it said the Philippines would be among the "most vulnerable" to the Japanese crisis given its significant economic relations with that nation. It noted that Japan was the country's single biggest export destination (20.4 percent of the total in 2010), the biggest source of imports (12.1 percent) and the biggest source of foreign direct investment (28.7 percent). Japan also accounts for more than one-third of the country's total GDP, measured last year, Global Vantage added.

Probably a quarter of a billion Philippines work in Japan, accounting for about 5 percent of employment. Global Vantage also noted that Philippine GDP (gross domestic product) has also been highly correlated with that of Japan (3.76 times the only 1980s and the present, though it has been closer with that of the United States (2001).

"Not surprisingly along with overvaluing exports by the recent rate of moves in Japan, there is also a risk of economic over a possible decline in trade diversification in production of semi-conductors and electronics, which are the Philippines' top exports, due to a breakdown of the supply chain," Global Vantage said.

Train donation to PNR to be delayed

By Paolo C. Montemayor

THE EXPANSION of the Philippine National Railway (PNR) capacity will take some time following heavy delays to the delivery of donated trains from Japan following the recent earthquake and tsunami that killed thousands of people and caused billions of dollars in damage.

PNR general manager Antonio Baguio said the transportation of the donated train service to local would push through as scheduled.

Japan East Railway Co. (JR) earlier agreed to donate 50 trains, which it would have otherwise discarded as junk, to PNR. While the trains were already shown to Japanese standards, those were still deemed suitable for the Philippine needs.

The government has approved the donation amount of P250 million to cover the shipping costs of the donated trains from Japan to Manila.

"It is very understandable. PNR has immediately expressed its deep concern to its work as donor for the crisis in Japan particularly since the earthquake and tsunami impacted the Northeast area, which is a major area of its train operations," Baguio said.

He said he had been contacted by JR officials, who apologized for the delay in the delivery of the donated trains.

"In the face of such magnitude under the most stressful circumstances, PNR management could only humbly say that JR must not worry about its donation," Baguio said.

He said JR should instead focus all its efforts in coping with the crisis like tragedy and devastation in the disaster area.

Most, one of the three train operators in Japan, across the country's northeastern, which is the area worst hit by the tsunami caused by the recent 8.9 magnitude earthquake.

For now, Baguio said the PNR would focus on the restoration of the train service to local using 16 refurbished sleeper trains that were also donated by Japan.

The PNR had said that it planned to spend P1.5 billion for the rehabilitation of train tracks to boost its facilities the faster movement of goods into Manila from key provinces in Southern Luzon.

Anxiety eats up retired overseas worker

QUESTIONS I used to ask as an OFW for many years and came from last year after my contract expired. I have had doubts right from night worrying how I can maintain my household expenses without a stable source of income. Although I have an ample cash savings, I am afraid I may eventually use up all of it and use my savings such as at times when I need to travel. I am 45 years old and it is not willing to wait again when I have to retire.

Financial anxiety is very common to many people who don't have a personal financial plan. Many people, even those who are very successful in their field, share the same problem: they don't know how to achieve financial security because they don't know how to prioritize their expenses. It is a good that you were able to set aside some savings for the future, but you should also know how to make it productive. It is necessary how you to start planning your finances and push life while you will have the resources and capability to do it.

MONEY MATTERS

To begin planning your finances, you should not postpone the following questions:

1. Where am I now financially? Analyze your cash flow. Look at your expenses and income. How much do you save every month? Are you able to pay your credit card debt on time? Do you spend your money more on consumption or investment? The answers to these will help you assess your ability to do the financial plan. It will also help if you can estimate your current net worth. You can do this by summing up your total assets, which can be your savings in the bank, home, car or any property, minus all your liabilities. Your net worth will tell you where you stand financially and you can manage it from there on.

2. What is my financial goal? Set your first objective when you want. Do you have any idea what your living standard will look like when you retire? How much income do you need when you retire so you can enjoy your daily expenses and enjoy life? Do you plan to move to your dream house in a few years? Do you have to travel? These are some of the many questions that will guide you in determining how much savings you need to accumulate.

3. When will I achieve it? When you have made up your mind of goals, clearly think in short terms or long terms. Do you think you can retire in a good within the year that they will be considered short-term. Any goal that is beyond one year should be considered long-term. Your short-term goals can be for buying a new cell phone for yourself. It can also be achieving savings target of 20 percent of your monthly household expenses, or leading a new job that pays well. Your long-term goals can be investing in an investment fund when you reach 60 years old or buying a vacation home.

4. What is my game plan? Develop a plan to achieve your goal. For example, you want to cut down your monthly expenses by 20 percent, your first step would be to reduce the number of times you buy your home to eat a week from daily. Put an action plan for every year in your life and try to keep a record of how you implemented it so you can review it.

5. How do I implement my game plan? Make a budget of your income and expenses and try to follow it consistently. A budget is similar to how you make your cash flow control but, this time, it is not about how you spend but how you plan to spend. You may not be able to follow every penny in the budget but this will help you become conscious of your spending. This can make your budget flexible as you can adjust when you need to and you go on track.

6. How do you know if you were on the right track? Monitor your progress regularly. You can review your plan once a year to see if you need to correct or make adjustments in your preparation if you need to add new goals. This may also need to consult a financial planner (FP) to help you at some point but specific consulting about your financial situation.

DOF opposes proposed removal of VAT on oil

Agency prefers subsidizing pump prices of petroleum products

By Ramon W. Singson

THE DEPARTMENT OF Finance is set on its position to keep the value-added tax on petroleum products despite calls for its removal as oil prices rise amid tensions in the Middle East.

The department explained that removing the tax on putting a cap on it would be self-defeating considering that the VAT on oil raised for the same refiners 150 billion in 2009, representing 12.5 percent of total VAT collections for the year and 4.5 percent of total tax revenue.

"Removal of the VAT on oil will cause major dislocation in the finances of the government," the DOF said.

"As far as the VAT on oil will also increase government's contribution to the national treasury, it will be made through the government's contribution to the national treasury," the agency said.

For 2011, when the government expects to spend P230 billion more than last year, the government is hoping to raise P1.1 billion to revenues.

The DOF believes that the abolition of the VAT would be bound to benefit the rich more than the poor because petroleum products are consumed directly more by those in the middle and high-income economic groups.

Instead of the VAT removal, the DOF proposes that any windfall collection from the imposition of dollar cap on oil should be used to subsidize the price of petroleum products and to fund other social welfare programs.

Windfall VAT refers to any additional VAT collection that can be attributed to the increase in the prices of oil imports.

This income is designed to fund the benefits arising from the windfall VAT to the marginalized sector of the population—those using public transportation as opposed to those owning high-end, classified motor vehicles," the DOF said.

The department stressed the windfall VAT could also be used as a source of non-additional cash transfer to the poor through a program called Katarung sa Buhay.

Subsidizing domestic energy prices through an oil price stabilization fund (OISF), according to the department, does not constitute production incentives, but artificially low prices, energy revenues may be damaged and inflationary and supply-side constraints of oil products may be recognized.

"Reducing the cost of oil is a source of income such as oil will have more the policy of promoting the efficient allocation of resources," the DOF said.

The department also said that the implementation of the OISF, as a mechanism to protect consumers from high oil prices, created huge fiscal losses," it said.

In 1989-1991, the OISF dollar reached as high as P18 billion, and which the government had to shoulder by injecting government money into the fund.

The DOF said the subsidy diverted government money from other priority expense such as health, education and infrastructure to the OISF.

Manila Mining Surigao projects on track

MANILA MINING Corp.'s mining operations in Surigao del Sur province in Mindanao are pushing through as planned, the company told the Philippine Star Sunday.

Manila Mining executive vice president Oscar A. Jara said the Manila and Government Bonds had already notified the company's mining rights.

A verification from the Geology Division 110 km of the MCR, which was awarded to the company's claim in the PHL, showed that Manila Mining had filed its prospecting application in Surigao del Sur.

There are covered by mining lease contracts, one by a mineral production sharing agreement or MPA, and one by a co-ownership permit.

"The mining projects are being explored and developed according to an approved work program," MCR regional director John G. Encarnacion said.

The mining lease contracts cover gold projects in two locations in Surigao, Surigao del Sur. An MPA covers a 211-hectare area also in Surigao. The exploration permit covers a property spanning municipalities of Misamis, Surigao and Surigao, Misamis Occidental.

Manila Mining started its mining operations in Surigao in 1981. It used to produce gold bullion, copper concentrate, containing gold, silver and copper.

Last year, the company announced plans to take advantage of the rising commodity prices by re-processing tailings at Misamis to recover gold.

MANA, chair and CEO Victor Yap said exploration work on the company's gold project has been looking at processing 100,000 tons of ore for a period of three and a half years.

Banks' exposure in real estate sector up by 10%

By Michelle V. Bano

REGULATIONS by universal, commercial, and thrift banks in the real estate sector rose by 10 percent in 2010.

According to data from the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, the Securities, in the form of loans and purchase of real estate, banks' exposure in the real estate sector rose by 10 percent in 2010, up from P203.4 billion in the previous year.

It compared with the end-of-the-year 2009 figure of P184.9 billion, when the number figure rose 4 percent higher.

The BSP said 97.3 percent, or P192.2 billion, of the exposure in the real estate sector was in the form of loans. This was up by nearly 10 percent from P180.7 billion the previous year. The loans were a mixture of residential and commercial loans.

The increase in real estate loans extended by banks, however, came with a corresponding rise in delinquency.

According to central bank data, the non-performing rate of real estate loans (ratio of outstanding, commercial, and thrift banks) rose to an average of 6.56 percent by the end of last year, up from 6.01 percent at the end of the previous year.

Industry sources said there was considerable demand for loans to fund purchases of residential properties from the continued growth in real estate.

They said credit-impairment-dependent households normally affect a portion of the income for the purchase of new homes.

Instead of loans for commercial properties was driven partly by the growing bank sector's growing exposure to the.

The BSP noted last year period an increase in delinquency on office space, industry sources said.

Of the total amount of real estate loans extended, 3.7 percent, or P11.8 billion was secured in securities-based loans. This was up by 30 percent from P9.5 billion by the end of 2009.

The BSP and many regulatory agencies, including real estate firms, had warned their measure of raising funds to include bank loan coverages, sale of bonds, and sale of equity shares.

Lending to export sector seen slowing

ANNE LEDGECHE: The export sector may experience a slow down in the aftermath of the earthquake and tsunami in Japan.

The disaster is seen resulting in reduced demand for imported goods, including products from the Philippines.

Amelia Montecino, president of the Bankers Association of the Philippines (BAP), said the recent in Japan might have an adverse impact on the Philippine banking system, particularly in terms of reduced lending to exporters, mainly producers of electronic goods.

Japan is one of the Philippines' major trading partners.

Montecino said the slowdown in lending to exporters could hurt the local economy.

"This [lending to exporters] may dip down in a quarter or two, but will likely pick up afterward," Montecino said Friday.

in the economic and financial prospects of the Philippines," he said.

Finance Secretary Cesar V. Magsalona said the Philippines needed readily to access the US dollar bond market, and added, however, that the Philippines' credit rating is still "on hold."

The country's Philippine culture's pro-active agency is attempting to restructure debt, extending its debt maturity profile during uncertain times for light of the volatility of the global bond market.

The Philippines' bond market is still in the midst of a slump.

Industry executives observed that bank lending growth, including credit to the export sector, had been maintained in the lower double-digit level for the past two years amid the rising economic anxiety in the country.

Looks to expect economic for between 10 and 20 percent of total companies have performed well.

Lower than from the Bangkok-based up Philippines showed bank lending to corporate entities falling P10.9 billion as of the end of January, up by 12.4 percent from P1.8 billion in the same month last year.

The disaster in Japan, which has led to the shutdown of more than 2,000 factories and about 11,000 people making, is expected to shrink the Japanese economy to the point of recession.

Lower than from the National Statistics Office showed that Philippine exports to Japan in January amounted to $200.1 million, accounting for 14 percent of total exports.

There is optimism among economists, however, that the aggressive economic stimulus efforts in Japan particularly in areas that were hit by the disaster, would lead to the recovery and gradual pickup of its economy.

The World Bank and the other day that it was, but the slow recovery, keeping its growth prospects for neighboring countries of Japan, including the Philippines, following that the economic impact of the disaster on these economies would be minimal.

Automakers feeling pinch of Japan quake

NISSAN MOTOR Co. plans to resume auto and parts production at more Japanese factories next week, but it may be several more before operations and other elements of the country's auto industry return to normal.

Nissan said it will resume production of parts at three plants Monday in three plants to resume vehicle production Thursday as long as supplies last.

Most of Japan's auto industry shut down after a powerful earthquake and tsunami devastated the country earlier this month. Nissan and other manufacturers have started resuming some production, but the industry will have selling challenges and infrastructure problems.

Supply levels probably won't return to normal until at least summer, said Michael Hudson, director of global production forecasting for B2B analysts.

"They certainly wouldn't want up if they didn't have all the equipment," he said. "It's how long they can stay producing to anybody's guess."

Honda Motor Co. has said it will suspend automobile production until Wednesday. More than 120 of its suppliers are based in the area near where the earthquake and tsunami hit, according to B2B. It said 65 dealers in an e-mail to credit guarantees when production will return to full capacity.

Toyota Motor Corp., which includes the Prius hybrid and Lexus luxury cars in Japan, has said its assembly plants there through at least Tuesday. Mazda Motor Corp. also said it would resume temporary production Thursday as a supply plan.

Problems in Japan have affected production in other countries too.

Gil and his staff will help production at a 300,000-unit, Louisiana, plant that relies on Japanese-made components for the two main pickup models.

Gil said last week it will help production at a 300,000-unit, Louisiana, plant that relies on Japanese-made components for the two main pickup models. It also said one of three plants will be closed at a plant in Bremen, Germany, on Monday and Tuesday. Another plant, in Stuttgart, Japan, will resume work Monday.

Gil said last week it is cutting necessary spending company-wide as it assesses the impact of production disruptions from the earthquake and tsunami in Japan.

"The whole industry is still in the process of figuring out what the implications are from the disaster in Japan," said GM spokesman Klaus Frieser.

The move will help the automaker prevent confusion it deals with the financial implications that stem from changes of parts made in Japan, a company spokesman said. The cost of doing so, which includes travel, lost office hours and will be in place for an undetermined period.

Nissan said last week that it was resuming production at its Honda plant for as long as supplies last. On Sunday the company said it would expand production for good to include its main production plants to include assembly.

But the plant is not yet in full production, said Nissan's chief spokesman David Benson. Nissan's head engine plant also will remain closed. That plant is close to other locations for the earthquake-damaged Fukushima nuclear power complex.

Benson said the company is still figuring out the impact from the earthquake, as they don't have a definite sense for how long they can sustain production. Nissan facilities had mostly closed. As soon as the work there resumes, including re-signing machinery.

But infrastructure problems remain big issues for Nissan, other companies and all their suppliers, Benson said.

Southwestern Japan is a major center for auto production, with many parts suppliers and a network of roads and ports for speedy distribution. It is so close to steel plants, oil refineries and nuclear power plants, some of which were severely damaged by the disaster.

Factories have an "incredible amount of efficiency" in rolling materials can power because the distance and plants can be difficult to protect, Benson said.

He noted that most problems are made it harder to get supplies and workers to factories, and trouble with a water supply also affects operations.

"It is more than one problem," he said. "It's not just everybody could focus their attention on it, but there are several areas," he said.

The combined indoor and outdoor exhibition floor area of 21,000 square meters for this year's motor show is 10 times the size of the MIAS 2009 exhibition floor area.

Home and what matters most to JC Buendia

By Alex Y. Vergara

DESKING JC Buendia originally wanted shabby chic interiors for his one-bedroom condo unit in Quinson City, but after realizing that the look wasn't "his," he went for a more streamlined, no-frills theme inspired by a typical Manhattan loft.

Inspired by the brownstone buildings of New York, he incorporated an arched wall in the bedroom made of bricks. Since the unit is barely 40 sq m, he replaced the existing door to the bedroom with sliding doors of framed opaque glass. This is to give it open.

"I put the flat screen TV in the living room," he says. "It's just like watching TV in bed. I simply slide the drawers open. Since the unit is also in the bedroom, I have the drawers open and the mirror out, exposed. It's like I have guests."

His favorite evening fare? Snapping wine.

DESIGNER JC Buendia lives alone—but not for loneliness.

The designer's good friend Kris Aquino has even slept on his no-frills, black living room couch ring fashion icons Audrey Hepburn, Grace Kelly and even Pinodol Buendia.

Known for his tailored, feminine-dorcas heavily influenced by the '50s and early '60s, Buendia has a complete collection of DZB's iconic Hepburn—from "Sabine" to "Breakfast at Tiffany's"—and some fashion icons, such as the Vogue documentary "The September Issue" and "Valentino, the Last Emperor."

"Don't get me wrong," he declares. "I love the Philippines. This is just my version of a New York City home."

Beside the main entrance, Buendia also has bookshelves displaying his mother's antique books on fashion and the arts. He also has some of his own on the last Princess So-ana. The bulk of his collection, however, was left in his shop in Cebu, where it got damaged in floods caused by typhoon Ondoy in 2009.

In keeping with his New York style of mind, the designer kept his furniture simple and modern in style. In fact, a bed, light-colored sofa, his dresser, he opted for a solid black leather couch and bedroom for his living room.

He chose a black couch, the kind used in a stylist's office as such—functionally—in American movies set in New York. In fact, it's off-white sofa.

Even his queen-size bed with a built-in platform is a space-saver—it doubles as storage. It was a gift from good friend and long-time client Kris Aquino.

A collage of small photos of family and friends stuck on the refrigerator door belongs his occasional father. A framed painting of his then young mother is also.

Single parent and proud

By Harriet K. Cox

MIDLAND, ENGLAND Willow Fawcett says she's proud to be raising her 10-year-old daughter on her own.

Willow is 10 years in Atlantic, N.J., and lives with her mother, who says she's both "independent, positive and confident."

"I keep telling my friends, Willow is my pride and joy," she adds. "My daughter and I don't look alike, but she got her spirit from me. Willow is very dramatic. She makes me feel like I'm not a single parent."

Secret ID

Willow has kept the identity of her father hidden for years. Willow, who says she's not a single parent, says she's not a single parent. Willow, who says she's not a single parent, says she's not a single parent.
